WITH AN OPENING TALK BY
STEVE NEVILLE

Surveillance technology and China's just-in-time labor workers

This talk examines how the use of surveillance technologies, the operation of platforms as a business model, and a shift in cultural expectations for on-demand service provision has transformed food delivery workers on digital platforms into a "just-in-time" labor force working at an increasingly hectic tempo.

Dr. Julie Yujie Chen is Assistant Professor at the University of Toronto. She studies how culture, digital technologies, and established economic structures shape the experience and perception of work.
