Winner of "Best Short Documentary" at the DisOrient Asian American Film Festival. Lauded as the epitome of the Canadian creative economy, contemporary circus in Quebec is both a government-supported art production and a global industry that relies on international markets and talents. In this documentary short, we meet Daqi and Shana, whose personal stories provide a window into a transnational circus world, where encounters of distinct acrobatic cultures and peoples can inspire personal growth, foster friendship, as well as induce a sense of alienation and distress.
